The public has no idea how far the ramifications of the story told by Dopey Benny of gang-rule in this city extend," declared Mr. Brecken-ridge, who for sixteen months has been delving into gang methods. He held a two hours' conference last night with "Dopey Benny," whose confession resulted in the indictment of fifty-six labor leaders and gang-sters for murder, assault, extortion and other crimes.

For more than four months "Dopey charged with murder in the first declaration of the story told by the revealations in connection with the Herman Rusenthai murder. John Wadinger, thirty-six years old, of No. 22 East Ninety-ninth Street, was arrested to-day by Detective climton Woods, at No. 29 West Twenty-ninth Street, where he was employed as a cloakmaker. He was taken to Police Headquarters and locked up, charged with murder in the first deand other crimes.

For more than four months "Dopey Benny" has been pouring his tales of hold-ups, murderous assaults, mainings and other offenses into Mr Breckenridge's ears. He has told, according to the Assistant District Attorney, almost incredible stories of how innocent workmen, supplanting those who had gone out on strike in various industries, had been waylaid, beaten and left dying on the highways, or carted to hospitals where they remained for weeks.

Who was Marie Dupont?

THOUSANDS of reader-detectives are on her trail! Roger Gavock, back to New York after twenty years'absence, accidentally jostles her on Fifth Avenue. She replies to his apology in French—their eyes meet—whereat she claims herself unable to utter another French word.

They part. Gavock is certain they have met before.

That evening!

Gavock relates the curious incident to Guy Amarinth, son of an old friend.

Not knowing her identity, the young man declares she conceals French associations because of fearful shame. Amarinth tells of the adorable girl he hopes to marry. He leaves the room. On his desk Gavock sees her picture.

It is Marie Dupont!

Gavock, stunned, accompanies them to the dance. In the coming installment you ask yourself: Why should Marie Dupont's dance electrify even her closest friends? What devil-born recklessness makes her consent to run out and marry Amarinth during the intermission?

Do you connect it with the terror-stricken face of the orchestra leader? With the unaccountable consternation that swept the whole room? Untangle this mystery and value
